

Today's News - December 2, 2002

It will take the rest of the week to catch up with the last four days! ArcSpace reviews beautiful books. – Architecture for Humanity announces Mobile AIDS unit competition winners. – A bit of backpedaling on Lower Manhattan development disagreements (there will be much more on this through the week, we're sure). – Is there something NY could learn from Dubai, Dublin, and Las Vegas? – Usual allies duel over fate of TWA terminal. – Global philanthropy. – No budget/no vision for socially responsible architecture? – Too much archibabble? – Growing pains (and poetry) in Sydney. – Good works in Los Angeles and Washington, DC. – You'll wish you'd kept those napkin sketches. – Arquitectonica believes in bold. – Viñoly breakthroughs for research and art... and more.

Editor's note: Our 7-day free trial to The Architects' Journal (UK) expired yesterday, but we still get to see the headlines. Today: Richard Rogers unveils his "best public building since Pompidou": a 300m-long elliptical design with a rooftop park and a public promenade in Birmingham.
